Relations between China and India have been notoriously difficult over the years but have improved since they established a strategic partnership in 2003. The statement issued on that occasion highlights clearly that the two countries have developed a shared common conception of their role on the global stage. Prime Minister Modi told President Xi that 'small incidents can impact the biggest of relationships'. Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi has been in office since 26 May 2014. He belongs to the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP). The relations between India and China have had their ups and downs. On 1 April 1950 India, the largest democracy in the world, became the first non-socialist country to establish diplomatic relations with the People’s Republic of China (PRC).
